1.6. Compliance

Crypto currency's accounts have commissions and the amount of this commission is a percentage of the value of your transaction.

1.7. Duty on establishing business relationships

Due to the fact that cryptocurrency accounts have trading leverage, you need a smaller amount of fund to make a transaction, but the higher the volume of your trade, the more commissions you will pay, for example:

Assuming the price of Bitcoin is $ 50,000 and you use the 1: 100 leverage, the amount of fund required by the investor for each unit of Bitcoin is $ 500.

An investor with $ 500 fund can benefit or lose from fluctuating a full bitcoin unit, which means that if he has chosen the volume on one lot and the price has risen to 52,000, Investor if buying bitcoins

At the rate of one lot, Has earned a gross profit of two thousand dollars.

Which is deducted from the above amount of 0.9% equal to $ 486 of the commission and the net profit is equal to 1515 dollars.

1.8. Identification procedures

If your transaction exceeds 23:59, a swap will be applied at 00:00.

The amount of the swap, like the commission, is a percentage of the value of your trade.

For example, for the above assumption, the swap applied for one night is equivalent to $ 173

The Swap fee is not fixed and is variable

1.9. High- risk countries

The investor is obliged to choose the most appropriate leverage and fund when opening an account.

Because trading leverage, Selected automatically after opening an account

1.10. Verification responsibility

Over Trading Or exceed in trading will cause the brokerage to automatically change the trader leverage.
